CONNOISSEUR.

By MR. TOWN,

CRITIC and CENSOR-GENERAL.

NUMBER XLV.

THURSDAY, December 5, 1754.

Quicquid agant homines, votum, timor, ira, voluptas, Gaudia, discursus, nostri farrago libelli.

JUV.

 HEN I first resolved on appearing in my present character, I had some thoughts of making my public entry in the front of one or other of our News-papers; as I considered that the domestic occurrences, which compose a part of their equipage, would make no bad figure in my own retinue. Some reflections on the modish methods of gaming would receive an additional confirmation from a paragraph in the News, that "last tuesday
"a game at Whist was played at White's for 1000l. a corner,"
"or that the match between his Grace the Duke of — and
"Lord — was decided at Newmarket :" and a dissertation on the luxury of the present age would be very aptly illustrated by an exact account of the weight of the Turtle, dressed a few days before for the gentlemen of the above-mentioned Chocolate-house.

INDEED I have always looked upon the works of Mr. Jennour in the Daily Advertiser as a kind of supplement to the intelligence of Mr. Town; as containing a more minute account of the important transactions of that class of mankind, which has been figuratively styled The World. From these daily registers you may not only learn, when any body is married or hanged, but you have immediate notice, whenever his Grace goes to Newmarket, or her Ladyship sets out for Bath: and but last week, at the same time that the gentlemen of the law were told that the Lord Chancellor could not fit in the Court of Chancery, people of fashion had the melancholy news that Signor Ricciarelli was not able to sing.

Now is that part of Mr. Jennour's lucubrations, which is allotted to Advertisements, less amusing and entertaining: and many of these articles might very properly come under my cognisance. It is here debated, whether the prize of eloquence should be given to Orator Macklin or Orator Henley; and whether Mr. Stephen Pitts is not the best qualified to furnish gentlemen and ladies libraries with tea-chests in Oktavo, and close-stools in Folio. And besides the public notices to persons of taste, of very rare old Japan, and most curious and imitable Epargnes for deserts, as also the most rich and elegant fancied silks to be sold by auction; many other advices, not less interesting to the Town, are here given. We are daily put in mind, that Mrs. Phillips at the Green Canister still hopes for the favours of her former good customers as usual: that next door to Haddock's dock's is sold an antidote against the poison imbibed at that bagnio: that Dr. Rock infallibly cures a certain epidemical distemper by virtue of the King's Patent: that a learned physician and surgeon will privately accommodate any gentleman (as the Doctor modestly expresses it in his own Latin) Pro Morbus Veneria curandus: and that Y. Z. a regular-bred surgeon and man-midwife, together with fifty others, will accommodate gentlewomen, that are under a necessity of lying in privately.

BUT not only the public transactions of Auctioneers, Brokers, and Horse-dealers, but the most private concerns of pleasure and gallantry may be also carried on by means of this paper. Affaignations are here made, and the most secret intrigues formed, at the expence of two shillings. If a genteel young body, who can do all kinds of work, wants a place, she will be sure to hear of a master by advertising: Any gentleman and lady of unexceptionable character may meet with lodgings to be let, and no questions asked. How often has Romeo declared in print his unspeakable passion for the charming Peachy! How many gentlemen have made open professions of the strictest honour and secrecy! And how many ladies, drest in such a manner, and seen at such a place, have been desired to leave a line for A. B. Before the late Marriage Act it was very usual for young gentlemen and ladies (possest of every qualification requisite to make the marriage state happy) to offer themselves as a good bargain to each other; and men took the same measures of advertising to get an agreeable companion for life, as they do for an agreeable companion in a post-chaise. As this traffick in matrimony is now prohibited, it has given occasion to the opening a new branch of trade; and since husbands and wives are hardly to be got for love or money, several good-natured females have set themselves up to sale to the best bidder. The Daily Advertiser is therefore become the universal register for new faces ; and every day's advertisements are crowded with offers of young ladies, who would be glad of the company of any elderly gentleman, to pass his leisure hours with them, and play at cards.

I LOOK upon the common intelligence in our public papers, with the long train of advertisements annexed to it, as the best account of the present domestic state of England, that can possibly be compiled : nor do I know any thing, which would give posterity so clear an idea of the taste and morals of the present age, as a bundle of our daily papers. They would here see what books are most read, what are our chief amusements and diversions : and when they should observe the daily inquiries after eloped wives and apprentices, and the frequent accounts of trials in Westminster Hall for perjury, adultery, &c. they might form a tolerable notion even of our private life. Among many other reasons for lamenting that the art of printing was not more early discovered, I cannot but regret that we have perhaps lost many accounts of this nature, which might otherwise have been handed down to us. With what pleasure should we have perused an Athenian Advertiser, or a Roman Gazetteer ! A curious critic or antiquarian would place them on the same shelf with the Classics, and would be highly pleased at discovering what days Tully went to his Tusculum, or Pliny to his magnificent Villa ; who was the capital singer at the Grecian Opera, and in what characters Rofcius appeared with most success. These pieces of intelligence would undoubtedly give great satisfaction ; and I am myself acquainted with a very learned gentleman, who has assured me, that he has been as much delighted at discovering that the Sofii were Horace's booksellers, that the Hecyra of Terence was damned, and other little particulars of that nature, as with an account of the destruction of Cartilage, or the death of Cæsar. We should also be glad to collect from their advertisements what things were most in request at Athens and Rome. Even our papers, (which perhaps are called Daily from their lasting but a day) are, I fear, of too fugitive a nature to fall under the inspection of posterity. To remedy, in some measure, this inconvenience, I shall now conclude my paper with a few advertisements, which if they have not actually been inserted in our papers, are at least of the same nature with those, that daily have a place there.
